35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

The claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. Claims 30, 38, 50 are rejected for having no hardware component. claiming a computer or client is not sufficient. To meet the machine or transformation test, a computer readable medium or hardware processor must be included within the claim language.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims not dependent on the rejected claims above appear to overcome the art of record.
